This month the gallery exhibitions \(http://www.examiner.com/topic/exhibitions\) are all about contemporary art and the reuse of different materials and techniques and creating new works. We've created a list of five galleries you should visit this June. Photography \(http://www.examiner.com/photography\), installation and video, print, painting \(http://www.examiner.com/topic/painting\), etching, and more are all on view at the galleries this month.

Dying on Stage: New Painting in New York

June 20 - July 20

This multi-artist exhibition presents the work of New York artists Tatiana Berg, Ariel Dill, Sarah Faux, Clare Grill and Kristina Lee, and is curated by Kyle Chayka. This exhibition features abstract work created by each artist in a new approach entitled "New Casualism." Chayka writes, "There's a new kind of painting bubbling up out of New York City. This new wave of painters are content to wander freely between abstraction and figuration, pure aesthetics and the real world, discipline and play. These are the New Casualists: young artists who pull their aesthetic influences as much from reality TV shows, online social networks, and pop songs as they do art history. Their visual vocabulary is nondiscriminatory — taking stock of the endless, sprawling deluge of imagery presented by the Internet, today's painters churn up their disparate references and influences into a fresh visual argot."
